The Twilight Zone: The After Hours

*By Rod Sterling, Mark Kneece,
Rebekah Isaacs*

Walker Books for Young Readers, $9.99, 72 pages

Very well put together, The After Hours once again showcases the fact that Sterling's famous Twilight Zone series is just as good now as it was so many years ago.

Kneece brings to the table a few minor fixes, and Isaacs illustration is crisp and has great flow; All of these factors culminate in an exciting retelling of The After Hours.

Marsha is shopping for a golden thimble that she saw on sale, and when she arrives at the department store, receives some very uncommon customer service. In the ensuing chaos of the day at the department store, she ends up falling asleep inside, and wakes up in a seemingly empty store. What follows has that ever-creepy vibe that The Twilight Zone is so famous for.
